

Teaching is referred to as a job, career, or a profession, but it's far more than that. I consider the choice as a way of life or even a way of being.

My teaching journey represents a lifelong commitment to learning, not only about my content area as the school policy but about true passion for new knowledge and skills that make me more effective as a professional and a human being.

My name is Kasonde Musanda, I am ambitious driven and God fearing lady. I thrive on challenges and constantly set goals for myself so I have something to strive towards. I came from a family where settling is not comfortable and always looking for an opportunity to be better and achieve greatness. Throughout my journey of life I have always wanted and trusted to make a real difference in the lives of people especially children this is the reason that I teach. It's what motivates me to work with children to hopefully empower them with knowledge that they can create a just world for themselves. However, the journey has never been easy in the sense that finances has been a challenge at some point.

Me being a teacher has been my childhood ambition and I surely enjoy a lot of things such as interacting, learning and helping them understand the content of the subjects I teach. I get to hear students speaking a new language (English) that I have taught them. I enjoy observing them learning to write. I also get to know their individual differences, abilities, and interests and my satisfaction arises from knowing I have made a difference however.
