

My name is Kingsley Siwale. I am a male born in a family of 2 and I am the first born, the other one is a female.

I started my grade one in the year of 2000 at Kafue Bridge Primary School. When I was in grade 5 my father died, this made my life difficult. As a result, we shifted to Kapiro Mposhi district where I continued my scholarship at Kapisu Primary School.

Unfortunately my mother died in the same year and I became a double orphan. This year was 2004, life became so difficult that I started burning charcoal for me to pay the school fees for grade 6, 7, 8, and 9.

Luckily my sister from the elder mother started to work as a teacher in the government, she was the one who started paying for my school fees from grade 10 up to college.

I became a teacher in the year 2016 when I just finished my tertiary education. I discovered that teaching was the gift from God when I was teaching my fellow students at school.

Lack of confidence in learning is the challenge to some learners which results in absenteeism from school. To address this issue I try by all means to explain the importance of education to the learners.

Please HealthEd Connect I just pray that you continue to support us in all areas so that we can also support our learners. I thank you for your tireless support you have been giving me.
